GRADED SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

Seven Graduates Awarded Diplomas—A most successful year for the school. The Address of Dr. Jas. P. Kinard.

The closing exercises of the Boundary Street Graded School on Friday night were a fitting close to a very successful session. Newberry is proud of her school, and as usual on such occasions, standing room could hardly be obtained in the opera house on Friday night.

The graduating class of 1902 was composed of seven members, six of whom were young ladies, there being only one young man in the class. The exercises consisted of the reading of essays by the graduates, and an address by Dr. Jas. P. Kinard, of Winthrop College. The essays were all good, and the young people reflected credit upon themselves and the training which they have received. But a medal had been offered to that member of the class who should write the best essay, and a decision was necessitated. This medal was awarded by the committee to Miss Pauline Gilder. The presentation was made in a happy talk by Hon. E. M. Rucker, of Anderson.

The following are the members of the class, with their subjects:

Miss Dora Mann, "Our Martyred President."

Miss Martha Johnstone, "What Work Is."

Miss Pauline Gilder, "The Climb of Life."

Tench Boozer, "Modern University."

Miss Pearl Langford, "One Touch of Nature Makes the Whole World Kin."

Miss Mamie Parks, "Thoughts on the Poets."

Miss Eula Teague, "Timrod."

The address by Dr. Kinard was a scholarly effort, containing excellent advice to the class and food for thought.

The following is a synopsis of

THE ADDRESS.

Dr. Kinard, in beginning his address, expressed pleasure at being in Newberry, his old home, saying that for one who had been away for a long time it was good to come home, to the place where his mother and father lived, to look into the faces of those whom he loved and who loved him. It had been fifteen years since he had taught in the old Newberry male academy, and thirty years since he had gone to school with the present superintendent of the city schools. But he wanted to say to the graduating class, that when a traveler along the proverbially rough road of life has reached the half-way milestone—it is a pleasure to him to pause for a moment, and looking back on those who are coming after, to shout to them a message of cheer to tell them of the bright fields beyond; and warn them, perhaps, of the rough places over which his stumbling feet have trod; or he may point out to them a path over which a steadier foot than his has passed, a path still radiant with the lustre of him who pressed it.

It was his pleasure tonight to tell them of a traveler who passed along this road a thousand years ago. His name was Alfred, to which his loving countrymen have added the title of "Great." His path was a royal one in both uses of the word royal, literal and metaphorical, for during his life he reigned over his people, and for a thousand years since he has reigned in their hearts. He told of Alfred's struggles with the Danes, who some time before his coronation had begun their yearly descent upon England, and for thirty years he was engaged almost constantly in fighting the battles of his country. He was the one man during that time who stood between England and heathendom; but when Alfred died Anglo-Saxon supremacy was assured.

But he did more than free his country from the Danes. During this struggle for their existence the laws of the land had been forgotten, the churches had been neglected, and the monasteries had been deserted. Priests had turned soldiers, and what little learning had existed before was now completely decayed. Here then was Alfred's work: to restore the laws—to re-instate religion, and to provide for the education of his people.

He compiled a code of laws, and upon this code established a system for the administration of justice that has lived till today as an essential and fundamental part of English jurisprudence. He built new churches and repaired the old ones; he invited learned monks and priests from other countries to come into England and teach his people. In the cause of education he was ahead, even of our time, for he did all that he could to establish universal education. He becomes our first English scholar.

What do we learn from a life like his? That we are to join the army and become great soldiers? He hoped not. There do come times in the life of men and nations when they must fight, and if this should come to us, then ought we to fight? But he wanted it to be remembered that Alfred was not a soldier by choice. His battles were fought not for himself, but for his country. His greatness, like the greatness of Washington, consisted not in brilliant displays of genius, but in the faithful discharge of the duty that lay nearest to hand.

And here is the lesson for you and me. There was no glory in itself in fighting the Danes; they were like pestiferous flies that must be beaten off time and again, and you must learn that you shall succeed or fail according as you have heart or lack it for the thousand and one little annoyances of life that need to be overcome.

The Danes are not all dead yet! The world is full of them today—threatening you on all sides—mind and heart and body. As for your body—remember that it is God's temple; let no evil pollute it. The full duty of man finds its best opportunity of accomplishment with a sound mind in a sound body.

And there are Danes threatening your mind and heart, insidious evils that rob you of the purity of your minds before you are aware of it. He wanted to name only one; the evil in books. The best books in the world are few in number and could be bought by every boy and girl in the audience tonight, and what is better, could be read in the time usually given to literature that is ephemeral and worthless.

There was another kind of evil that he must warn them against, the feeling that they had completed their education with a school or a college course. Alfred was a student all his life, not only of books, but of men and things—and so must every one be who would be truly educated. This thing we call education is not a knowledge of a few text-books—nor indeed of many. It is a drawing out of a man the best that is in him. It is a training that begins in the cradle and ends when life ends. It is the seizing and using of every means of acquiring wisdom.

We may also learn something from Alfred the Christian, who, when he came to re-establish law and religion in Wessex, held to all that was good in the old law and religion of his people. In the unrest of today there is a great reaching out for new things. It is too often true that young men and young women feel that the religion of their fathers and mothers needs to be modified somewhat, that it is too old fashioned to look well; or they think that this thing you call religion does very well for old women and children, but for us—we want a little stronger stuff than that! Listen! If the old fashioned belief in God, and a firm faith in his mercy and providence, will help you and me to live the kind of life that it helped Alfred to live, then we need all of it that we can get.

There are many men and women who would give a great deal to stand where you stand tonight, with youth and health and a good conscience, before the felters of custom and evil habit have fastened upon you. To you now, anything in reason is possible. Only remember this: If you are to accomplish anything worth doing you must go about it at once. It is possible for a man to think about what he is going to do till the time for action is passed. The most successful life, the life that comes nearer to doing what a life ought to do is the one in which there is a balance of intellect and activity, and if you are going to do anything you must do it at once. If you are to make the best of your life you must think as well as work. He believed we should all be better and saner if we spent a part of each day in solitary thought, in thinking about God and the universe, and in trying to learn something about the strange being we call ourselves.

It is a fine thing for us that such a man as Alfred has lived. When we are weary and heartsick at the selfishness and meanness of humanity—its lying, cheating, backbiting and slanderous gossiping, when we are oppressed by all this, the life of Alfred comes to us like a breath of fresh air to a sick man, it revives us, it gives us new hope; we see that there is possible for this poor, pitiful humanity to lose itself in others, to crush out all that is low and mean and degrading, and to show to the world a life in which all is patience and courage and love.

If you should ever be so unfortunate as to be oppressed by that sickly sentimental mood that is always wondering if life is worth living, I commend you to Alfred, to him who near the end of a well-spent life said, what I trust that you and I in like season may be able to say: "The while I have lived I have sought to live worthily."

AWARDING OF DIPLOMAS.

The awarding of the diplomas was made by Mr. Robt H. Welch. He sought to impress the fact that their education should be just beginning, and gave facts and figures to sustain his argument for a college course. His short address, which was laden with thought, received the undivided attention of the large audience.

All Classes Can Get It.

The grocers who are handling "Clifton" flour are the ones who have the best class of flour and the tightest grip on it. "Clifton" is a flour of quality, and goes into the homes of people who want the best the market affords, and this applies in this free country to all from the lowest to the highest station. No summary laws can prevent the humblest American citizen from buying the purest and best flour and every good housekeeper knows she gets the purest and best when she buys "Clifton." THE MAYOR'S COURT.

An Unusually Large Number Before His Honor Mayor Klettner.

There is usually a pretty large mayor's court on Monday morning, but yesterday Mayor Klettner had over an hour's sit, and he had all kinds of charges to listen to. The first case called was that of Ben Spence, colored, who threw a rock at a woman for which he justly had to pay $10 or serve 20 days.

Next came eight negro men who pleaded guilty of gambling. Four got $5 each or 20 days; two $2 each or four days, and the sentence against two was sealed.

Lou Fair was convicted of idling around the depot and sentenced to pay a fine of $3 or serve 10 days.

Katie Mayes, colored, was convicted of running a disorderly house and had to pay $15 or serve 30 days.

Lillie Anderson, a black negro woman, managed to prove herself innocent of the charge of running a disorderly house and was dismissed with a lecture and a timely warning from His Honor.

Lottie Jackson and Lou Fair, two terrorists to decency, were convicted of public indecency, that is appearing on the streets in indecent apparel, and Lottie was sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or 15 days; Lou got off with $1 or 2 days.

A negro boy pleaded guilty of throwing rocks on the streets, and as this was his second or third offence, he had to pay $5 or serve 15 days.

Another negro boy pleaded guilty to shoving a negro woman off the sidewalk. He got off at $2 or 4 days.

Minnie Lake, colored, was tried in her absence for using abusive language on the streets and a sealed sentence awaits her.

Three other cases were continued.

Ready to Yield.

"I used Dr. Witt's Witch Hazel Salve for piles and found it a certain cure," says S. R. Meredith, Wilcox Grove, D.C. Operations unnecessary to cure piles. They always yield to Dr. Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. Cures skin diseases, all kinds of wounds. Accept no counterfeits. W. E. Pelham's & Son.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

Whereas our Brother and co-worker in the council of Grace Evangelical Lutheran congregation, Sidney J. Kohn, did on the 2nd instant, lose by fire his barn, two good mules, one horse, two wagons, gears, oats, corn, etc., and,

Whereas our Saviour commands us to love our neighbors as ourselves; and the spirit teaches, that, if one member suffer all the members suffer with it; therefore,

Resolved, That we do hereby express the deep sympathy of the council for him in this loss, and assure him, that he may depend upon the council and congregation to back up their expressed sympathy by substantial help, whenever he calls upon us.

Respectfully,
H. S. BOOZER.

Impure Drinking Water.

Is always a source of danger; dysentery and all bowel troubles follow its use; every person should have a handy bottle of Painkiller (Pain Expeller), which will quickly cure these distressing ailments. Be careful and see that the storekeeper does not pawn off some worthless substitute upon you as it sometimes does for the sake of a few cents extra profit. Large bottles 25 and 50 cents.

Virulent Cancer Cured.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Robert of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man here had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this cures its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. Bitters 50c., Salve 25c. at all druggists.

You can never tell what a man is until you get into an argument with him. If his opinion doesn't jibe with yours he is a crank.

Was We-ting Away.

The following letter from Robert R. Watts, of Salem, Mo., is instructive. "I have been troubled with kidney disease for the last five years. I lost flesh and never felt well and doctored with leading physicians and tried all remedies suggested without relief. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and less than two bottles completely cured me and I am now sound and well." Sold by Gilder & Weeks.

A reformer is a man who, if wise, begins on himself.

Interests to which Sufferers.

Daniel Bantle, of Ottumwa, Iowa, writes, "I have had asthma for three or four years and have tried about all the cough and asthma cures in the market and have received treatment from physicians in New York and other cities, but got very little benefit until I tried Foley's Honey and Tar which gave me immediate relief and I will never be without it in my house. I sincerely recommend it to all." Sold by Gilder & Weeks.

Before marriage a man yearns for a woman; after marriage he earns for her.

On the first indication of kidney trouble, stop it by taking Foley's Kidney Cure. Sold by Gilder & Weeks.

When your health runs down you should wind up some of your bad habits.

Warning.

If you have kidney or bladder trouble and do not use Foley's Kidney Cure, you will have only yourself to blame for the result, as it positively cures all forms of kidney and bladder diseases. Sold by Gilder & Weeks.

When a man finds a button in his salad he should bear in mind it is only a part of the dressing.

Ten Years in Bed.

R. A. Gray, J. P., Oakville, Ind., writes, "For ten years I was confined to my bed with disease of my kidneys. It was so severe that I could not move part of the time. I consulted the very best medical skill available, but could get no relief until Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended to me. It has been a Godsend to me." Sold by Gilder & Weeks.
